The sunny resort of Quinta do Lago which lies on the southern coast of Portugal has been a favourite with celebrities over the years. Pop stars such as Elton John, Madonna and George Michael are rumoured to have property in Quinta do Lago, as well as the famous footballers Alan Shearer and Luis Figo, and so the prices for real estate here are accordingly expensive. There are also plenty of English people in Quinta do Lago and the resort has many amenities to cater to holiday makers and residents. These include everything from restaurants serving all types of international dishes to interior decorators offices.

Quinta do Lago is near to two busy holiday establishments. One is called Vale do Lobo and the other is the Almancil and if you have hired a car you can easily make the short trip to see them. To the east of Almancil is the church of São Lourenço which is covered inside with outstanding 18th Century ceramic tiles. It is a fine example of Algarvian Architecture and is certainly worth a visit.

Other sights are the Estádio Algarve which was used in the 2004 European Football Championship. The stadium is the home ground of the local teams Louletano DC and SC Farense but it is also used for charity matches every now and again.
